John Williams RIP - We are very sorry to have to record the recent passing of John Williams after a short illness. John was an extremely reliable member of the baritone section, a fine musician and a true gentleman. He will be sorely missed. We extend our deepest sympathy to his family.

A MESSAGE FROM THE CHAIR

I would like to take this opportunity to offer you a warm welcome to the Arena for what promises to be an exciting evening. Preparing the two very different works for tonight's concert has been very interesting and challenging for the choir. "The Armed Man" was very well received by members and audience alike when we sang it a while ago, and the Suite from it has revived our interest in the work. It is to be treated as part of a 70th Anniversary "Battle of Britain" commemoration, and will stand alongside items by the orchestra and soloists – giving the choir a rare treat, in being able to sit, listen, and enjoy!

"Carmina Burana", never previously performed by the choir, is another favourite with some choir members, although some of the words, written as they are in basic Latin and German, are a little "strong" for the more delicately-minded members! Still, there are plenty of good tunes, and I'm sure you'll enjoy tonight's concert.

I hope to be able to welcome you to our Christmas Concert on 18th.December in Oldham Parish Church. Tickets are available tonight in the Foyer – oh, and good luck in the Raffle !

Fred Jones – Chairman.

Zoë Milton-Brown - Soprano

Born in South Wales, Zoë read English at Christ's College, Cambridge, where she was a choral scholar, before winning an entrance scholarship to the Royal Northern College of Music where her postgraduate studies were generously supported by the Fenton Arts Trust. She has performed in masterclasses with Philip Langridge, Dennis O'Neill, Anne Williams-King and Patricia MacMahon and, earlier this year, was a finalist in both the RNCM Concerto Competition and Elizabeth Harwood Prize.

Operatic engagements include Angelica Orlando in the Ryedale Festival, Susanna Le Nozze di Figaro (Opera Festival Utrecht, Netherlands), Zerlina Don Giovanni and Papagena Die Zauberflöte (Opera Project) and, in concert performances, Gilda Rigoletto with Birmingham Chamber Orchestra. For the RNCM Zoë appeared as Vitellia La Clemenza di Tito and, in opera scenes, as Nedda I Pagliacci, Blanche de la Force Dialogues des Carmelites, Giulietta I Capuleti e i Montecchi and Blanche DuBois in André Previn's A Streetcar Named Desire. Most recently, Zoë appeared as Fiordiligi Così fan Tutte in the Mananan Opera Festival and covered the role of Margiana in Cornelius' Barber of Baghdad for Buxton Festival Opera. Concert engagements include Mozart's Requiem in the Matthias Church, Budapest, Strauss' Vier Letzte Lieder, Mozart's Missa Brevis K.258 (Buxton Festival BBC Broadcast), Haydn's Creation, Barber's Knoxville in the RNCM Concert Hall and, as part of the New Music North West Festival, Gary Carpenter's Closing Time. Earlier this year, Zoë performed Alan Williams' song cycle 12 Storeys High in the Bridgewater Hall (BBC 'Ink Still Wet Series') and was a soloist in Alexander Goehr's Sing Ariel in the Wigmore Hall. Forthcoming engagements include Rutter's Magnificat in Liverpool Cathedral, further performances of 12 Storeys High in the Royal Exchange Theatre, Manchester and the National Theatre, London and recitals in Manchester, Oxford and Liverpool in addition to a series of appearances with the Band of the Royal Air Force Regiment.

Nick Hardy - Tenor

Nick comes from Liverpool and trained at the Royal Academy of Music. As a chorister he has worked for English National Opera, Welsh National Opera, Scottish Opera, Wexford International Festival Opera, Buxton Festival Opera, Edinburgh International Festival and Civit Hills. As a soloist he has appeared for Scottish Opera in Der Rosenkavalier, (1st Footman), The Two Widows, (a fragment of Tonik's role), Manon, (Vendor - pipes), La fanciulla del West, (Joe), and Katya Kabanova, (Tikhon - cover). For Buxton Festival Opera he covered the title role in Offenbach's Bluebeard, for European Chamber Opera he has sung in an Opera Gala and for Heritage Opera he sang Nemorino in L'elisir d'amore. For local non-professional companies, mainly in the north-west, he has sung 30 major roles, and for choral societies throughout the UK he has sung many tenor roles in oratorio, most especially Verdi's Requiem and Elgar's The Dream of Gerontius.

Phillip Joll - Baritone

Phillip Joll made his American debut as Donner in Wagner's Das Rheingold at the Metropolitan Opera. At Seattle Opera, he made his debut as Wotan in the 2000 preview of Das Rheingold and Die Walküre. The Welsh baritone returned in 2001 as Wotan/The Wanderer in Wagner's Ring. At Welsh National Opera, his many roles include Wotan in the company's first Ring (which was also performed at Royal Opera Covent Garden), Kurwenal in Wagner's Tristan und Isolde (recorded for Decca), the title role in Verdi's Rigoletto, Amfortas in Wagner's Parsifal (recorded for EMI), the title role in Verdi's Simon Boccanegra, Barak in Richard Strauss's Frau ohne Schatten, Jokanaan in Richard Strauss's Salome, the title role in Berg's Wozzeck, and Tonio in Leoncavallo's Pagliacci (recorded for television). Elsewhere in Europe, he has appeared at opera companies in London (English National Opera and the Royal Opera), Edinburgh, Munich, Paris, Turin, and Amsterdam, among others. Other recent appearances for Joll include Wotan/The Wanderer at Oper der Stadt Köln, Boccanegra at Badisches Staatstheater, Jokanaan at Opera North, and Sharpless in Puccini's Madama Butterfly at San Francisco Opera.

Phillip most recently sang with the Oldham Choral Society, alongside his partner, Italian mezzo-soprano Emanuela Barazia, in the Verdi Requiem in Chester Cathedral in the autumn of 2008.

Karl Jenkins: The Armed Man - A 10th Anniversary Celebration

The Armed Man, is subtitled "A Mass for Peace". It was commissioned by the Royal Armouries Museum for the Millennium celebrations, and to mark the museum's move from London to Leeds. It was dedicated to victims of the Kosovo crisis. Like Benjamin Britten's War Requiem before it, it is essentially an anti-war piece and is based on the Catholic Mass, which Jenkins combines with other sources, most notably the fifteenth century French folk song 'L'homme armé', ('The armed man'). Guy Wilson, then master of the museum, selected the texts. In addition to extracts from the Ordinary of the Mass, and 'L'homme armé', the text incorporates words from other religious and historical sources, including the Islamic call to prayer, the Bible (eg. the Psalms and Revelations), and the Mahabharata. Writers whose words appear in the work include John Dryden, Rudyard Kipling, Alfred Lord Tennyson, Jonathan Swift and Sankichi Toge, who survived the Hiroshima bombing but died some years later of leukaemia.

It was written for SATB choir with soloists (including a Muezzin), and a symphonic orchestra. It was premiered at The Royal Albert Hall, London on April 25th, 2000, performed by The National Youth Choir of Great Britain and the National Musicians Symphony Orchestra with Julian Lloyd Webber as the cello soloist, and conducted by Grant Llewellyn.

The Armed Man charts the growing menace of a descent into war, interspersed with moments of reflection; shows the horrors that war brings; and ends with the hope for peace in a new millennium, when "sorrow, pain and death can be overcome". Jenkins' choral suite taken from the full work provides the basis for the first half of our concert.

June 2011 Choir Tour to South East Ireland

On June 2nd 2011 the choir depart for Ireland where we will link up with the Wexford Sinfonia to present two performances of Mendelssohn's "Elijah".

On Saturday June 4th we will perform "Elijah" in the new state of the art Opera House at Wexford, and the following evening we will be repeating the concert in Waterford. We will also link up in the Sunday morning to sing Mass with the City of Waterford Brass in the magnificent setting of Waterford Cathedral.

Our previous visit to this region was a tremendous success, and we look forward to repeating this. If there are any singers who are interested in joining us for this exciting project, please contact us. [Wives, husbands etc. are also invited to join us].

Part 1 “REFLECTIONS ON WAR AND PEACE”

A 70th Anniversary Commemoration of “The Battle of Britain”

2010 marks the 70th anniversary of “the Battle of Britain”, arguably the most significant conflict of the 20th Century. What could defeat for the RAF have meant for the future history of Europe?

“Never in the field of human conflict was so much owed by so many to so few” (Winston S. Churchill)

In the first half of our concert we commemorate the victory of “the few” in music, as we reflect on images of “war and peace”.

The march “Aces High”, which begins our evening, was written for the 1969 film “The Battle of Britain” by Ron Goodwin, who also wrote the music for “633 Squadron” and “Where Eagles Dare”. Oldham born, Sir William Walton composed the original film score, but the American directors felt that it was too short and brought in Goodwin, who was a leading composer of film / light music, to take over. In the end only two short extracts of Walton’s original score featured in the final cut, (during “the battle in the air”). Goodwin’s music is generally considered to be inferior to Walton’s, but it encapsulates the atmosphere of the film perfectly. The “Aces High” march accompanies the lengthy opening sequence in the film, depicting a Luftwaffe general's inspection of a Heinkel squadron. Despite its origin, (a representation of a tyrannical threat to democracy), and the music, which is in the style of a Prussian military march, the music has become a popular British patriotic tune, like the Dambuster’s March, and is frequently played at military parades / celebrations etc.

Walton had already written the memorable score for the 1942 film “The First of the Few”, directed by and starring Leslie Howard, which relates the story of R.J.Mitchell’s development of the spitfire fighter. The Spitfire prelude taken from this film makes an appropriate conclusion to this commemoration.

“The Armed Man” was commissioned by The Royal Armouries (Leeds) to mark the millennium. It is described as “A Mass for Peace”. The complete work runs for just over an hour and includes a wide variety of musical styles and texts.

Karl Jenkins, the composer, also sanctioned a choral suite which includes about 30 minutes of the music. We are including this suite in our programme. Four of its movements are settings of the Catholic Mass: Kyrie eleison, Sanctus, Benedictus and Agnus dei, and there is also the setting of Rudyard Kipling’s poem “The earth is full of anger”.

We have also added the final chorale, ‘God shall wipe away all tears’, from the full version, with its message of hope and consolation.

Finally in this commemoration we include two famous solos by Handel written in the 1740s. These two settings of Biblical text are as relevant now as they were back in the 18th century. A time when, as throughout the history of the Western world, the tragic consequences of man’s inability to live at peace with his fellow man were all too apparent. Most of Europe was at war over the Austrian Succession, and Britain was at war against Spain. Within the “United” Kingdom itself there was internal strife, with Scottish factions remaining loyal to the Jacobite, (Catholic), cause. Indeed Handel’s “Judas Maccabaeus” was seen as an allegory, celebrating the slaughter of the Jacobites by the English at Culloden in 1746.

A BRIEF HISTORY OF CARMINA BURANA

Born in 1895 into an upstanding Munich family of officers and scholars, Orff had established himself as a significant figure in the small but important modernist musical oasis in otherwise conservative Munich, the League for Contemporary Music, but as an artist, the odds seemed stacked against him when the Nazis came to power. As a representative of the “avant-garde” it would have been expected that the composer would become yet another victim of the Third Reich’s oppressive cultural policies. Like many other artists of the time, Orff was considered a ‘leftist’. He had many Jewish friends, including Kurt Weill and the poet Franz Werfel, and collaborated extensively with well-known Marxists like Brecht. There is also evidence that Orff was a quarter Jewish, a fact that could only have added to his insecurities. Recognising the precariousness of his status in the new Germany, he tried to establish his loyalty to the Nazi regime. Cynically choosing to forget all associations with Jewish, leftist, or modernist artists, Orff emphasised his hatred of jazz music and the atonality of Schoenberg and his disciples, and emphasised his own sincere and deep-seated appreciation of folk music. Awarded a job composing music for schools, he developed his theories on music pedagogy, trying to integrate his ideas into the music policies of the Hitlerjugend (Hitler Youth), sometimes tailoring them specifically to Nazi demands.

Carmina Burana was premiered in Frankfurt in 1937 to great success. It was originally staged, with dancing and mime accompanying the music, but despite Orff’s increasing contacts with Nazi officials, the premiere was met with a stinging critique by the influential Nazi musicologist Hans Gerigk. According to Gerigk, Carmina Burana suffered from a 'mistaken return to primitive elements of instrumentalism and a foreign emphasis on rhythmic formulae'. For most, such a damning review would have signalled the end of the piece, if not of the career of the composer. However, his positive contacts with high-ranking figures, and the sheer popularity of the piece with the public, gradually transformed it into a hit. Despite its exotic sounds and sexual themes, the piece came to be perceived as 'a celebration of the power of an uninterrupted life instinct' and its elemental melodies and rhythms were said to bear witness to 'the indestructible and always re-emerging power of the ways of the common people'.

Several performances were repeated elsewhere in Germany, and it became the most famous piece of choral music composed in Nazi Germany. Following this success, Orff found a comfortable place for himself within the Party machinery, consistently appeared at Reich events, and was the willing recipient of a Nazi state subsidy.

Orff wrote the following letter to his publisher, Schott Music: "Everything I have written to date, and which you have, unfortunately, printed, can be destroyed. With Carmina Burana, my collected works begin."

After the war Orff was forced to appear before a de-nazification tribunal. Aided by a sympathetic American, he was exonerated. He claimed that he had been a founder member of the “White Rose” resistance movement, which had been organised by his close friend Kurt Huber. This was not true. In fact, he had never had any involvement with the group, and when Huber was arrested and executed for his activities in 1943 he refused to intervene. According to Huber’s wife, she begged Orff to use his influence to help her husband, but Orff denied her request. If his friendship with Huber came out, he told her, he would be “ruined”. Huber’s wife never saw Orff again. Wracked by guilt, Orff would later write a letter to his late friend Huber, imploring him for forgiveness.

The Music of Carmina Burana

There are many composers who are famous for a single work, but few of those works have achieved the iconic status of Carl Orff's Carmina Burana. Its opening section is well known to millions who will not even have heard of its composer, and will be totally unaware of its origins.

Along with the "Hallelujah" chorus it must nowadays be the most immediately recognisable of all choral works.

It is a rather unlikely fate for a man far better known as an innovative and influential educator than as a composer.

Carl Orff (1895-1982) spent much of his life in his native Munich. He came from a musical family and began studies at the age of five. He briefly studied at the Academy of Musical Arts in Munich, but was dissatisfied with his teachers, and he was largely self-taught as a composer. While recovering from wounds sustained during World War I, he began to study the music of the 16th and 17th centuries, especially that of Monteverdi. This began a lifelong fascination with not only music of that period, but also with ancient texts. He also developed a lifelong fascination with the theatre.

Orff developed a theory that music was founded on rhythm and movement, and stressed improvisation based on fixed rhythmic patterns. He made extensive use of percussion instruments, many of which he developed himself and which are still used today as "Orff instruments." His theories and exercises were published in a massive five-volume 'Schulwerk', subtitled 'Music for Children'. His ideas about music education were extraordinarily influential, giving rise to a world-wide educational movement.

Orff's music for Carmina Burana reflects much of the theory he developed in his Schulwerk. The music is highly rhythmic and features not only an extensive percussion section but also occasionally percussive use of the text. Harmonically, he pares his music down to its essential elements. The choral parts are all homophonic and largely consist of unison singing or lines harmonized in thirds. They are set above orchestral parts which feature rhythmic or harmonic ostinatos. Orff composes in short musical phrases, and each section may have several distinctive phrases which repeat with each subsequent verse. While the overwhelming feeling is one of rhythmic energy, there is considerable variation in the treatment of the different poems, and Orff also displays a wonderful melodic inventiveness. The rhythmic complexities of Carmina and the shimmering orchestration clearly show the influence of the Russian, Igor Stravinsky. In particular, Stravinsky's early cantata, 'Les Noces', (The Wedding). Rhythm for Orff, as for Stravinsky, is often the primary musical element.

Some of the solo arias pose bold challenges for singers: the only solo tenor aria, Olim lacus colueram, must be sung almost completely in falsetto to demonstrate the suffering of the character (in this case, a burning swan). The baritone arias often demand high notes not commonly found in baritone repertoire, and parts of the baritone aria Dies nox et omnia must be sung in falsetto: a unique example in baritone repertoire. Also noted is the solo soprano aria, Dulcissime which demands extremely high notes. Orff intended this aria for a lyric soprano, not a coloratura, so that the musical tensions would be more obvious.

BOOKING DETAILS FOR FORTHCOMING EVENTS

Tickets for our Christmas Concert on Saturday December 18th - priced just £7.50, are available this evening at the desk in the foyer; can be obtained from any member of the choir; or can be purchased on the door
Telephone reservations: 01457 875 221 (The ticket secretary).

This concert is becoming an unmissable highlight of the Christmas season. One of Britain's leading brass bands join us in the ambient setting of Oldham Parish Church for an evening of Christmas favourites including carols for all.

ON APRIL 16th we will be performing Mendelssohn's "Elijah" at the Royal Northern College of Music

Whilst this is a little further away from Oldham than our usual venues, it is a vastly superior facility, and it should provide a much improved experience for our audience.

Every seat has a perfect view and is comfortable. All members of the choir and audience are clearly visible from every viewpoint, and the acoustics are superb.

There is good parking, disabled access, plenty of toilets and a licensed bar.

We hope that all our regular supporters will join us for what we hope will be a memorable performance.

Ex-RNCM student, and now internationally acclaimed opera star, Darren Jeffery sings "Elijah". Darren has established himself as one of Britain's leading operatic bass – baritones, and has appeared regularly at the Royal Opera House Covent Garden and in the major opera houses of Europe and America.

He is joined by one of Britain's leading mezzos and RNCM staff member, Ann Taylor; soprano Camilla Roberts, who was the Welsh representative in BBC Cardiff Singer of the World; and one of the rising stars of the opera world, RNCM student, the popular South African tenor Sipho Fubesi.

With the East Lancs Sinfonia providing the accompaniment under the direction of Nigel Wilkinson, this should be a memorable evening.

Tickets are available from any member of the choir or from the RNCM Box Office 0161 907 5555

Seats can be reserved, so the earlier you book, the better choice of seats.

All tickets are £14, (except for under-16s, who if accompanied by an adult, pay only £1!)

CREDIT CARD BOOKINGS ACCEPTED AT THE RNCM BOOKING OFFICE.

Following our sell-out G & S Gala last season we are presenting another double bill to close our 2010 / 11 season.

Iolanthe and The Pirates of Penzance

Iolanthe, with its famous chorus of Peers, and the Nightmare song, has always been regarded as one of Sullivan's best scores, and its satire on the British Political system remains as topical as ever, especially in these days of the "Con – Dem" coalition.

The Pirates contains one well-known number after another, including Poor Wandering One, A Modern Major General, With Cat-like Tread and A Policeman's lot is not a happy one.

These two popular works will be performed by a talented cast of G & S specialists and narrated in his own erudite and witty style by international opera star Donald Maxwell. For this concert we will be accompanied by THE NATIONAL FESTIVAL ORCHESTRA.

They are established as the resident orchestra at the Buxton International Festival of Gilbert and Sullivan, and as such, can probably be regarded as the leading exponents of Sullivan's music in the world.

Tickets for our previous "G & S" Gala sold out well in advance, so early booking is strongly advised. For booking details visit our website early in the new year, or contact our ticket secretary on 01457 875 221

Testing time for capable choir

OLDHAM Choral Society chose two substantial and very different works for its latest concert.

The first half was devoted to Karl Jenkins' "The Armed Man", commissioned for the millennium by The Royal Armouries. It is an anti-war piece based on the Latin Mass and dedicated to the victims of the Kosovo crisis.

The choir was accompanied by the East Lanes Sinfonia, which only lacked two or three first violins to be a really well-balanced ensemble.

Sentiment

A few items were incorporated into the work to provide a flavour of the Second World War and add religious sentiment. Nick Hardy (tenor) was splendid in Handel's "Sound an Alarm" and Charlotte Carter, a very late replacement on the night, sang Handel's "How Beautiful are the Feet of Them that Preach the Gospel of Peace" with great delicacy.

The choir was well disciplined, looked splendid and responded well to Nigel Wilkinson's robust direction. The backdrop of war images enhanced the performance.

In contrast to this serious and solemn work, the second half was given over to a complete performance of Carl Orff's "Carmina Burana".

Charlotte Carter and Nick Hardy were joined by the considerable presence of baritone Phillip Joll.

Orff deliberately wrote fiendishly high notes for the soloists in order to generate tension during the more profane passages of the work. This came off spectacularly well.

The orchestra coped satisfactorily with the tricky rhythms and other effects required. The percussion and brass sections particularly were well up to their task.

The choir is very capable and the music was well within their compass. I only wish they had looked a little less serious, as though they were relishing the risky verses and the double entendres.

As is usual nowadays with mixed choirs, the men were quite outnumbered. A few more would just give the choir the balance it so slightly lacks.

Nevertheless this was a very enjoyable evening.
